2016 National Leadership Symposium
Intentional and Evidence-Based Practice in Leadership Education:
Celebrating 20 Years of the Social Change Model of Leadership Development

We know much more today than ever before on college student leadership development, and it is our responsibility to use this great insight to guide contemporary practice in leadership education. The 2016 National Leadership Symposium will capitalize on this knowledge and focus on how leadership educators can incorporate intentional and evidence-practice in leadership curriculum and co-curriculum. We will focus on intentional and evidence-based pedagogies, practices, and considerations that can maximize student leadership learning and development. Engage with leadership scholars, Dr. Susan Robb Jones, Dr. Biren (Ratnesh) A. Nagda, Dr. Crystal L. Hoyt, and Dr. Susan Komives, in this highly reflective and extremely practical immersive experience that aims to re-think, re-envision, and re-design leadership education.

About the National Leadership Symposium (NLS)
NLS is a professional development experience designed for faculty members, student affairs professionals, and other educators involved with promoting leadership education at colleges and universities. The program is coordinated by the National Association for Campus Activities (NACA) and the National Clearinghouse for Leadership Programs (NCLP) and includes a variety of formats, exercises, and conversations to engage different leadership styles and preferences, both introverted and extroverted.

Given the immersive learning environment of the Symposium, it is advised that participants have significant professional experience in leadership education. In order to fully engage in the Symposium learning community, participants are expected to have read several selected readings in advance of arriving for the NLS experience. The NLS is designed for an intimate collegial learning environment of 50 participants, and engagement will involve intense periods for learning in the large community, small group, and individual levels.
