

Publication Agreement

Without cost to author, the author (or authors) grants, sells and assigns to the National Association for Campus Activities (the “publisher”) the rights to publish this work. Author understands title of work may be changed to meet editorial requirements. Author understands this article may be edited, changed or revised to meet style and editorial policies, or withdrawn from publication if such action is deemed appropriate. Publisher shall copyright the material to be published in publisher’s name and the copyright, together with all renewals and extensions thereof, shall be the sole property of publisher. The assignment of rights herein shall apply also to any reprints of the material. Author also understands that NACA has the right to use this article as a resource to be distributed from the NACA Office or NACA Web site and may be used in future publications, including online posting. Author represents that they are the sole proprietor of the work; that it does not infringe upon any existing copyright; that it has not heretofore been published; and that to the best of their knowledge, it contains no libelous or other unlawful matter. Author shall indemnify publisher against any claim, demand or recovery finally sustained in any proceedings brought against publisher by reason of any violation of proprietary right or copyright by, or any unlawful or libelous matter contained in the work. Credit for this article will be given to the author on its original publication, on all reprints or in future publications, as well as in any online use. Author will receive no financial remuneration for use of this work by NACA.
